

Here's what husbands said about our last Spectacular Marriage conference:

Great information presented in a manner that kept it enjoyable.

Open, frank, and scripturally sound.

I found out it's okay and even good to have conflict.

It was informative and practical.

Down to earth.

Good session on conflict. We all need to talk about it because we all have it.

Gave us Ideas on working through issues.

It gave us a chance to talk openly about some stuff and it made us feel closer just by doing that.

The conference wasn't centered around general ideas, but at specifics in a marriage; focusing on including God in our marriage.

Recognition of sources of conflict and differences and then discussion of practical solutions.

Doing and discussing the projects was really good.

Good advice to use in my marriage to grow more intimate.

The group projects allowed me to get an understanding of my relationship with my wife.

The best part is that it is an opportunity (time set aside) to address items that we wouldn't normally address. Also you brought the Word into it. Marriage doesn't work if we don't use the Bible!

Nice to have marriage discussed by a neutral party that can point out behaviors that appear in marriage.

Pegs the differences between men and women and how to find oneness in spite of differences by capitalizing on each other's natural attributes.

Conflict resolved in a Godly way – practical suggestions for differences.

Of all the things I learned at the conference, the thing that jumps out is:

We need to get away to develop more intimacy and transparency.

I need to re-focus myself on my wife.

Accepting the weaknesses as blessings.

Strengths and weaknesses and how God uses them for couples to be one and complete each other.

Conflict is good! The ways to deal with conflict were eye-opening. Although our marriage has little conflict, these methods to deal with that conflict will help us grow closer together.

That marriages naturally drift toward isolation.

Conflict is good!

We are different and we don't have many problems.

Importance of developing a marriage plan that supports God's plan.

That seeking God more in your relationship is a must.

I need to be more observant and tuned in to my partner.

Marriage is a joint effort.

I guess I knew the things that my wife, but it may have stuck now! (???)

It's always nice to know the problems we are having are common problems and we don't have the worst marriage in the world.

Most of us face the various issues sooner or later in our marriages and need to work through them.

If I were inviting a friend to Spectacular Marriage, I would tell them:

It is a wonderful experience even if you have a great marriage.

Be prepared to enjoy and learn. It was fun, yet poignant, honest, humbling.

Great way to focus on your relationship and ways to improve it.

Worth the time to really look in yourself.

This is a great workshop for people who are serious about their marriage and making it work.

It deals with real life issues that we all face.

It is very revealing.

It's a good chance to reconnect with your spouse.

You learn a lot, and have fun.

All marriages (couples) should come to this conference, no matter how great or how old the marriage is, we all need to be reminded of God's ideal of marriage.

There is so much about marriage to learn.

It will help them find God's plan for their marriage.

The workshops will encourage them to be honest and look at their marriage.

How informative it is.

It will transform your relationship

Gary is very knowledgeable!

It was great!
